Report Highlights:

On August 5, 2011, India fully implemented the Food Safety and Standards Act, 2006. The Act officially repeals the regulatory framework established by the previously existing eight food laws, consolidating them into the Food Safety and Standards Rules and Regulations 2011- under a single regulator- The Food Safety and Standards Authority of India.

General Information:

On August 5, 2011, India fully implemented the Food Safety and Standards Act, 2006. The Government of India (GOI) officially repealed the regulatory framework established by the previously existing eight food laws, consolidating them into the Food Safety and Standards Rules and Regulations 2011- under a single regulator- The Food Safety and Standards Authority of India. For further details please see the notification F.No.P-15025/41/2011-DFQC, issued by the Ministry of Health and Family Welfare on August 4, 2011.

Background:

On May 5, 2011, the GOI Ministry of Health and Family Welfare published the final Food Safety and Standards Rules, 2011 vide Notification No. G.S.R. 362\(E\) in the Indian official gazette. As stated in the notification, these rules came into force on August 5, 2011. These rules specify enforcement mechanisms, sampling techniques, and other legal aspects for implementing Section 91 of the Food Safety and Standards Act 2006.

On August 1, 2011, the Ministry of Health and Family Welfare published the final Food Safety and Standards Regulations, 2011 vide Notification No. F.No. 2-15015/30/2010 in the Indian official gazette. The Food Safety and Standards Regulations, 2011, came into force on August 5, 2011. These regulations contain labeling requirements and standards for packaged food, permitted food additives, colors, microbiological requirements, etc. These regulations officially transpose the Prevention of Food Adulteration Rules, 1954 as amended. The final Food Safety and Standards Regulations, 2011, as published in Indian Official Gazette (Notification No. F.No. 2-15015/30/2010) on August 1, 2011 is available on the FSSAI's website (www.fssai.gov.in):
