Report Highlights:

Israel's Ministry of Economy and Industry and Ministry of Agriculture and Food Security have published updated duty-free and reduced-tariff agricultural import quotas, covering the remaining balance of 2026 and the full 2027 calendar year, with the United States named among the eligible trading partners.

Scope of Quota Allocations: The Import Administration of the Ministry of Economy and Industry of Israel has published its allocation of duty-free and reduced-tariff import quotas for agricultural and food products, covering both the remaining balance of 2026 quotas and the full-year 2027 quotas,[1] as of July 14, 2026. "First-come-first-served" quotas, valid for only three months, will be announced for distribution in quarter 4 of 2026, though applications may be submitted year-round, subject to availability. Separately, the Center for Foreign Trade and International Cooperation (CFTIC) of the Ministry of Agriculture and Food Security of Israel has also published the remaining balance of 2026 quotas under its purview,[2] as of July 13, 2026.

Trading Partners Covered: The notices detail an extensive list of tariff quota lines, allocated by country and trading partners, which includes the United States, the European Union, Canada, and Mexico, as well as Jordan and the United Arab Emirates. The Mercosur bloc – Brazil, Argentina, Uruguay, and Paraguay – is also included, alongside the European Free Trade Association (EFTA) countries of Switzerland, Liechtenstein, Norway, and Iceland. Additional partners named in the notice are Panama, Guatemala, Colombia, Ukraine, the United Kingdom, South Korea, and Vietnam, along with general quotas for WTO/GATT member states.

The Ministry of Economy and Industry notice also states the following:

1. A portion of many quotas is reserved for the Palestinian Authority.

2. The Republic of Türkiye's quota distribution remains temporarily frozen in response to Turkish export boycotts against Israel, pending further announcement.

3. U.S.-Israel agricultural trade terms are currently under renegotiation, which may result in the cancellation of tariffs and levies on certain U.S. agricultural products. Accordingly, import licenses for quotas on the affected products may be canceled, with new terms and conditions for import established through a subsequent customs tariff order.[3]
